arrangements made with John Swearinger, Senate Committee on Rules, and Administration staff, called Steve Stelzner, of the Committee staff, and told him that I did not think the Agency should assist the Committee in the destruction of its old microfilm records under the appearance of impropriety doctrine. He agreed that the point was well taken and I provided him some numbers he may call within State and HEW to assist him. In response to my observation that we certainly would not want to be involved in destroying the microfilm of the New Hampshire vote, he responded that the records involved Watergate.
